No other state is more synonymous with gambling than Nevada.

Millions of people make their way into the state each year to try their luck.

Usually, they just go home with a story, but occasionally, someone will find a way to turn the sand into gold.

Nevada is also an online gambling state.

You can play online poker and bet on sports online as well, as long as you are inside state lines.

The state authorized online poker, but left online casinos out of the legislati on.

However, with so many other states finding success with online gambling, and newer generations of players increasingly living their lives online, things could c hange in Nevada.

What Are W-2 Scams and How Can You Protect Yourself?

Keeping your personal information safe can be an important part of preventing identity theft, but sometimes you don't have control of the matter. A data breach could give hackers access to your username, password and other sensitive information. Or, if your employer falls for a W-2 scam, they might send your W-2 to a cybercriminal who will then have your name, address, Social Security number and financial info from the company.

The attack can take different forms. However, according to the IRS, the scam usually starts when cybercriminals "spoof" an email to make it look like they're sending an email from an executive at the company. It's a phishing technique that relies on deception and social engineering to trick the victim

Share information with coworkers. You can share warnings and informational articles, such as this one, with colleagues to help them learn about scams.

You should immediately report the issue to the company when you think you've fallen for a W-2 scam. Additionally, you may want or need to report the loss to law enforcement, state agencies and the IRS.

The IRS page also has specific instructions for how to report the W-2 scam. If y
