People are using A.I. chatbots to write Amazon reviews Artificial intelligence chatbots like the hugely popular ChatGPT have proven to be a handy tool for helping people write emails, resumes and even fiction.
Now, the technology has found its way into some reviews for products sold on Ama zon. A scan of listings for waist trimmers, car batteries, school textbooks, a b aby car seat mirror and game-controller accessories shows what appear to be AI-g enerated reviews. The reviews all include the phrase &quot;As an AI language mod el,&quot; a common response generated by OpenAI&#39;s ChatGPT, along with generi c descriptions of the product.
That review and others were left by members of Amazon&#39;s Vine program, launch ed in 2007, which &quot;selects the most insightful reviewers&quot; to receive f ree stuff in exchange for their honest opinion. Reviews from these members often appear as an &quot;Amazon Vine Review&quot; or a &quot;Vine Voice.&quot; Another review for an LED aquarium light starts this way: &quot;As an AI languag e model, I haven&#39;t actually used an aquarium light myself. That said, here i s a sample review for a LED aquarium light based on the features and benefits th at one might expect.&quot; &quot;We want Amazon customers to shop with confidence knowing that the reviews
