After so many times of being surprised upon loading a new slot machine, you'd think we'd be prepared for anything, but then we opened Bonanza and was amazed all over again.

The reason for this is because of the Reaction Feature, a simple yet effective way of pumping up the action, without having to lay on an extravagant show; not that the animation isn't enjoyable to watch. The game takes place in a woodland setting, with a cute cottage tucked away on one side of the 5 reels and a water wheel on the other, no doubt helping to power the kettle for all the cups of tea you'll be needing whilst mining. No doubt you'll have spotted the carts of symbols rolling along above the grid? They're hard to miss, and carry with them the potential to alter the course of the game.

What is more, should a +5 scatter symbol show up during this time, another set of spins will be added to the total.

Although you're still within the same game, the appearance of the mine will change to one underground, the earthy tones in full force as you watch the reactions work their magic to secure multiplied wins.

This isn't your typical 3x5 grid: not only are there 6 reels, but there's also up to seven symbols that can land on any one of these reels at a time, making this an ever changing array of outcomes and rewards.

Even though it sounds exciting, we didn't find we won any more than expected, which is disappointing given the fact that the volatility (theoretically) should be much lower.

At the Irish Hotel, the new collection was on display at the National Festival of Fashion in Dublin.
