I was excited to discover PingPong as a newcomer to the online market research field. The service specializes in user experience testing for apps and websites, with pay rates ranging between <40 and <100 an hour. (Roughly $45-110.)

Minneapolis

The online studies I saw ranged from $75 to $300.

15. SIS International

Through "compensated interviews" and focus groups, SIS helps brands figure out direction for their products. You can see a full list of available paid studies on this page.

17. Prolific

Typical studies pay anywhere from $2 to $100, paid out via PayPal. The biggest complaints from users are that the often in-depth screener surveys are unpaid. Topics included pets, hygiene, cooking, luxury cars, and lots more. There are some handy filters you can use to select only online or "National" studies.

What Is a Betting Bot?

EZY Gaming Spots Customer Connections With SEON The Netherlands-based iGaming operator relies on data enrichment to access granular user info and spot bad actors while remaining compliant.

There are two key advantages to this.

During the Euro 2020, certain gambling sites received up to 52,000 bad bot requests per hour.

Are you seeing a significant increase in website visitors that's not matching expectations or spend?
