Because the winner of elections is often decided by public opinion and voting, it can be tough to predict the views of so many people. You can also bet on how much of a percentage of the voting a candidate might ge t, along with how many votes they will beat their opponent by. These are all possibilities after the two candidates are selected for the final election. The primaries are when candidates within a party run against one another to see who will face off against the other party's choice. Similarly to the final elections, betting on how many votes a candidate wins in the primary is another possible bet to make. If they are from one party and have a low approval rate, a member from another party might promise to make changes. These elections aim to elect someone who will represent a group of people on a national stage. Law-making seats will have at least some national media coverage, as they repre sent people while making laws for the nation.
