The failure of the bills Monday, the deadline for bills to pass out of their ori ginal chamber and "cross over" to a new chamber, means it's unlike ly that any sports gambling measure will pass this year.

Some Georgia lawmakers typically attempt to expand gambling every year, but none of the efforts have succeeded since voters approved a state lottery in 1992.

The failures show how far lawmakers are from reaching an agreement, with Cowser later telling reporters "there's so many crosscurrents" among law makers who want different things.

Many Democrats have pushed sports betting as an funding mechanism for needs-based college scholarships.

Nan Orrock, an Atlanta Democrat.

Cowser argued that a constitutional amendment is needed because when Georgia vo ters approved a state lottery in 1992, sports bets could only be placed in perso n in a Nevada casino.

House and Senate Democrats lined up behind the constitutional amendment approac h because it would allow the possibility of expanding how any related revenue co uld be spent.____
