Outside the school gates, every third sixth former admits to knowing someone involved on the sites or to running one of their own. One boy whose face is the unhealthy colour and texture of porridge tells me he works eight hours every night on his fake news and then comes to school.

The peddling of false news on lookalike American news sites is not illegal but it here's something a little underhand and dirty about the whole game of misleading readers.

Goran insists he's given up fake news now - although he does let slip he's just bought a rather smart laptop. As we drop him off at his parents' house I ask him what his mum would make of his dodgy online activities. He looks at me as if I'm nuts.

"Made up?" I offer.

3. Check other sources:

Are other reputable news or media outlets reporting on the story? Are credible sources cited within the story? Professional global news agencies have editorial guidelines and extensive resources for fact-checking, so if they are also reporting the story, that's a good sign.

4. Maintain a critical mindset:

I was looking for this question on "Quora";....

There are two ways.....firstly to ask your customers to drop positive reviews and suppress the negative one

I mistakenly flagged a Google review as inappropriate while it was clearly not.

Will it get removed?

How do I post multiple (fake) reviews on Google My Business without being removed?

"The first time I ate chalupas, I was at a restaurant in NYC and someone pulled out a chalupa bagel.

I thought the bagel was a piece of cheese, but then I looked at the side to see the tiny piece of cheese sticking out of the bagel.
